HISTORY OF THE EAST ALABAMA COLLEGE—AS TOLD BY THE OLD SETTLERS OF AUBURN.

MISS F. M. KNAPP, '08.

Most of us know that our school at Auburn has not always been the A. P. I., nor even the A. & M. college, but that it was first owned by the Methodist Conference, and was known as the East Alabama College. Since this was, in a sense, the "mater" of our Alma Mater it will, perhaps, be interesting for us to know something of its history.

Back in the fifties, when the conference decided to build another college in the State, several towns began to compete for it, among which were Greensboro and Auburn. Finally it was decided that there should be one at each place, and agents were appointed to raise the funds by subscription.

Rev. E. J. Hamill was our agent. The people subscribed liberally, and work on the college was soon begun. The laying of the corner stone was a great event for Auburn. People flocked in from all directions, in wagons, buggies, carriages, on horseback, and on the train. The sills for the first floor had been put up, and boards were laid across them, on which the exercises for the day were held. After a very eloquent speech by Bishop Pierce, of Georgia, the corner stone was laid by the Masons, and Judge J. M. Wiley, of Troy, father of one of our present congressmen, made an hour's talk.

Then came the dinner. That I shall not attempt to describe, but am sure it was no small part in the exercises of the day. That night there were fireworks and much merry-making.

Work on the college was completed in 1859. It was a four-story brick building of thirty-eight rooms, including two society halls, lecture rooms and offices, chemical laboratory, library and museum.

The school was opened in the fall of 1859, with about eighty pupils. The president, Dr. Sassnet, and five teachers, composed the faculty, and the subjects taught were mathematics, Greek, Latin, English, political economy and chemistry. Dr. Darby, who afterwards manufactured "Darby's Fluid," and who was at the time professor of chemistry in the Masonic College for young ladies at Auburn, became a member of the faculty, and for a year or so the young ladies from the Masonic College went down every day and took chemistry with the East Alabama students. Co-education at the beginning! What demure little creatures they must have been! Those sweet, shy maidens of the fifties of whom the modern prattling, laughing co-eds have often heard their grandmothers speak—and what a joy to their professors!

The Wirt and Websterian Literary Societies were founded at the beginning. "For the advancement of research and oratory." The Websterian badge was a right angle triangle with squares constructed on all three sides, the figure used in proving that "the sum of the squares on the two legs of a right triangle is equal to the square on the hypotenuse." I have not been able to find out about the Wirt's badge, but perhaps they despaired of getting one that would suggest a more complicated subject, and so decided to do without.

There were five graduates from the college the first year, and seven the next, but then came the war, and the school was closed. I have found only one instance in which a student who left to go to the war, afterward came back and finished.

During the war the building was used for a hospital. In '66 the college was opened again with Col. Dowdell as president, and the next year there were only two graduates. It does not seem to have grown much for the next few years, and the conference began to feel that it could support it no longer. It was offered to the State under the condition that the college should always

It was offered to the State under the condition that the college should always be kept up at Auburn. This offer was accepted, and the college passed into the hands of the State, where it has been since 1872.

Of course the old college was very different from the A. P. I. There was no drill, no walking of the "Q," no hazing, no cutting up on the streets at night—what good boys our fathers were!—neither was there any "Kandy Kitchen" at which to loaf. I have found out nothing as to their punishments, and in despair have concluded that they did nothing to be punished for. Truly the times have changed!

However, the boy of that time was not entirely different from the boy of today. He had his amusements, which were foot ball, town ball, straight cat, white sides, and others of which I had never before heard.

The commencements were mostly held in the hall, which stood near the corner occupied by Mrs. Will's house at present, and which afterwards was moved and became Langdon Hall. These commencements were truly great occasions. They lasted from Sunday morning till Wednesday night, when they closed with a "levee." The campus of each college was lit by great bonfires of lightwood, and Auburn, in all her glory, "took a walk." At different times we had many distinguished men to deliver the sermon and addresses, among whom were Admiral Raphael Semmes, of the "Alabama," Dr. J. L. Curry, and Dr. J. B. Hawthorne.

"From scenes like these the present Auburn's grandeur sprung."

Auburn scored another victory in the oratorical contest for the Cox medal this year. At the kind invitation of the Selma Commercial and Industrial Association, the Alabama Intercollegiate Oratorical Association held its contest in the Academy of Music in Selma. A large and enthusiastic crowd was present, and the encouragement given the speakers by their supporters was almost as energetic as that awarded the athletic teams. I. G. McCann spoke on "Our Heritage as Southerners," for Greensboro. J. A. Prescott, representing Howard, treated "Socialism" in his oration. R. H. Liddell, Auburn, spoke on "Traits of American Character."

THE NEW BUILDINGS.

C. G. G., '08.

This year of the history of the college has been characterized by extensive building and development, thanks to the liberal policy toward education on the part of Governor Comer and the present Legislature of Alabama.

The first new building of note that has been constructed is the Engineering Building. This is a three-story building of red brick and white stone trimmings. The three floors on one end are occupied by the Department of Mining Engineering. On the first floor is installed extensive ore dressing machinery, which is the largest plant of the kind in the South. The second floor furnishes the office and Mineralogical Laboratory, and the third floor the recitation and drawing room for the Mining Department.

The east end is occupied by the Electrical and Mechanical Engineering Departments. On the first floor is the electrical laboratory and the mechanical testing laboratory for heavy work.

On the second floor is the telephone engineering laboratory and lecture room for Electrical Engineering. On the third floor is the mechanical lecture room and testing laboratory for lighter work.

The Dining Hall, located across the street from the college, is a handsome two-story structure 140 feet long, built in semi-colonial style, with an imposing portico in the center. The tall columns and pediment above add great dignity to the building. This building is of brick and stone, constructed in what is known as the Flemish bond style, giving a very pretty effect.

The main dining hall will accommodate 300 students. Electric lights of the newest type will be installed. This light is something of a novelty in the South, and is remarkable for its brilliancy and high economy.

On the second floor there are twenty-one rooms, furnishing accommodations for forty students.

The architect is Mr. W. T. Warren, a distinguished graduate of this institution.

The Carnegie Library Building is well under way of construction. It is situated on the lot formerly occupied by the Y. M. C. A. building on Faculty Avenue, facing the drill ground, and is most beautifully located amid a group of lovely shade trees.

The building will be of the semi-classical or monumental type, and will be constructed of pressed brick with elaborate white stone trimmings. It will be two stories in height, 80 feet long, by 80 feet wide.

The approach is a vestibule leading into a commodious reading room 80 by 40 feet, which is the main feature of the edifice. The stack room is in the rear, and will accommodate 60,000 volumes.

This will be one of the most extensive libraries in the South, the building costing $30,000, donated by Mr. Carnegie, the college setting aside $30,000, the income of which goes to support the library. About 25,000 volumes are now in the collection of books, valued easily at $50,000. This makes the total valuation $110,000.

In accordance with the contract, this building will be completed for occupation next year. The architect is Prof. N. C. Curtis, who occupies the chair of architecture in the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

The designs of the new Agricultural Building are well under way, and will be ready for submission at an early date. Professor Curtis also has charge of this work.

The Agricultural Hall will be an extensive three-story building for the departments of Agriculture, Horticulture, Botany, Entomology, Animal Husbandry, etc. It is thought that the location will be on the crest of the hill in the horticultural grounds, a beautiful and appropriate site.

President Schurman, of Cornell, realizing the growing importance of Western State universities, declared that the only way for the Eastern universities to keep pace with them is to reduce and even finally abolish tuition. As the Western State universities are supported by taxation, tuition is nominal, and the sons of the poor man may enter with almost equal facility with those of the well-to-do.

The President does not believe that discouraging athletics will help the institutions. He told the ball players that some one wrote him recently asking his advice about the college situation. He said that in his reply he advised that more games be won by the teams of the institution.

President Schurman, of Cornell, realizing the growing importance of Western State universities, declared that the only way for the Eastern universities to keep pace with them is to reduce and even finally abolish tuition. As the Western State universities are supported by taxation, tuition is nominal, and the sons of the poor man may enter with almost equal facility with those of the well-to-do.

Jim: Saw a lot of people going blackberrying the other day.

Bin: You did? Where were they going?

Jim: They were going to a colored funeral.

AUBURN COLLEGE TEAM.

The base ball team this year has proven to be one of the best Auburn has ever turned out. However, they have always had one of the "high water" kind ever since Coach Donahue has been with us. With the exception of the Alabama games, Auburn has lost only one game out of twelve played. Alabama seems to be our "Jonah" in all departments of athletics, but we will give them another trial next year.

Following is the score by innings of the fifteen games already played:

CAPT. STEELE.

James T. Steele, the man chosen to lead Auburn's husky base ball bunch during 1908, comes to us from Uniontown. "Jimmie" is one of the ancient founders of the class of 1908, having come to Auburn in September, 1903, and since that ancient date has spent most of his time playing base ball, and making scores of friends.

Capt. Steele has proved himself to be a great college ball player, and was placed on the All-Southern for two successive years. Only his inability to play will keep him from making it this year.

Auburn Pitchers—Reynolds, Edwards, Smith.

SENIORS AND JUNIORS VICTORIOUS.

In two hotly contested base ball games played on the campus Saturday, May 2, between the four classes, the Seniors and Juniors defeated the Freshmen and Sophomore teams respectively. The former won by the score of 9 to 5, and the latter won out by 10 to 0.

Batteries: Seniors, DeShazo and Lipscomb; Freshmen, Hordage and Sanders; Juniors, Taylor and Marm; Sophomores, Smith and Falkner.

FOOT BALL PROSPECTS.

COACH DONAHUE.

Prophesying what a foot ball season will bring forth is always a risky proposition; still, a word or two in regard to the prospects next fall may not be amiss.

Of the players who carried the team through such a successful season last fall there are due to graduate, Batson, Paterson, Ware, Hughes and Wilkinson. Of these Wilkinson and Hughes have played their limit, so that they are lost beyond all doubt. Of the others, there is a possibility that some of them may be back. Even with all these gone there is left a splendid nucleus for a winning team. In the line are Davis, Locke, Esslinger, Motley, Everett, Wynne and Hill. To either help these players, or to show them how the positions ought to be played, are such men as Bonner, Coggdel, Beaver, Lamb, Caton, Allen and Taylor. Besides Gantt, of the '06 team, will be back, and will be anxious to prove that he is just as good as the rest—there ought to be merry times in the formation of the line next fall. Back of the line there is Capt. McClure at quarter, McCoy at full or half, Sparkman at half, and Ware, should he return. McCoy gave promise of being a star man last year until sickness laid him low; not before he had crossed Sewanee's goal line, however, which is not done every day in the week. Here's hoping that he will repeat. Penton is another man that had the same trouble, only more so. He was working nicely in the backfield until misfortune overtook him, so that he is anxious for a chance to prove that he can play as well in the backfield as anywhere else. He is likely to do it, too. With these two in good health to help out the others, the backfield won't be so far behind the line.

From present indications it would seem that an impregnable defense could be built up from this material, and while the offense may not be brilliant, still there are possibilities that can be developed into a very powerful and consistent attack.

SOCIAL NEWS.

SEYMOUR HALL, Editor.

On Monday, April 27th, Memorial Day was observed with appropriate exercises in Langdon Hall. The program included an oration by Cadet Capt. Howard, a vocal solo by Miss McMillan, a recitation by Miss Rutledge, and music by the Cadet Band and Glee Club. At the conclusion of these exercises the battalion was marched to the cemetery and the usual salute fired.

On Saturday evening, April 25th, Miss Olive Steadham entertained delightfully, complimentary to the junior class basketball team.

Miss Phoebe Cary was the charming hostess to the senior class basketball team at an entertainment given at her home on April 23rd.

The Auburn base ball squad had a very enjoyable trip to the U. of A. Several social functions were given in their honor, among which was a delightful dance given by the local chapter of the S. A. E. fraternity.

The squad was again entertained with a dance by the young men of Columbus on the occasion of the recent trip to that city to play Mercer. A beautiful german was danced at the Hotel Racine.

Prof. Wiatt (while reading a French play)—That refers to the story of Damon and Pythias. You have heard of Damon and Pythias, haven't you?

Perplexed Senior—No, sir; but I've heard of Knights of Pythias.

Newberry—Say, Mr. Thomas, what made you wait so long to play "retreat" out at the cemetery?

Thomas—I was waiting to see if Co. D was through firing that last volley.

A FEW FACTS AND FIGURES COLLECTED BY OUR STATISTICAL SAM.

The average man who spends four years at Auburn eats 8,105 pounds of beef, and from 13,000 to 15,000 biscuits. He wastes 123,879,654 1-2 foot pounds of energy drilling. The sheets of scratch paper that he uses would, if laid end to end, reach from the center of the earth to the Celestial sphere. He buys about two tablets (after his freshman year he sponges on the college), and he doesn't buy any books. He rents them and returns them at the end of the year. Although he visits the postoffice six times per day, he gets one letter a month (maybe). The oil that he uses, if collected in one body, would float the battle ship Texas. (After supper he lights his lamp and then goes visiting.) If, however, he is furnishing his own oil, he burns almost two gallons. If all the hot air expended by Kandy Kitchen loafers were liberated at once, the cyclone that would result would leave Auburn in a worse condition than Albertville is. The Railroad Ranch men have missed three trains. (But you can hardly blame them. The "flyer" has been late three times and didn't come through till 2:30 p. m. Later information says that Rat Douglass, as delegate of the Railroad Ranch, met one of these trains.) The monthly expenses are $15 (according to the catalogue), but some letters to Father seem to intimate that this estimate is per day.

The Cadet's diploma (IF he gets it), will have cost him $6.53 per square inch, or $673.54 per oz.

That is all, as the average student is satisfied and quits after he gets his diploma.

Editorials

We wish to congratulate the junior class on their excellent display of foresight in electing their Orange and Blue board for the ensuing year before the close of this session. As this is the plan which we advocated in a previous issue, we hope that we may claim some share in causing its adoption. If the editors, knowing so far in advance the responsibility that will be theirs next year, busy themselves as they should during the summer, we predict the best Orange and Blue that the college has ever known for next year.

The class announces the following editors: Editor-in-Chief, W. I. Pittman; Assistant Editor, S. H. Richardson; Business Manager, R. A. Burleson; Advertising Manager, J. M. Powell; Literary Editor, M. B. Gottlieb; Social Editor, E. E. Binford; Exchange Editor, B. E. Harris; Athletic Editor, D. Herren; Engineering Editor, J. G. Stelzenmuller; Agricultural Editor, H. J. Chatterton; Assistant Business Manager, E. W. Lind; Cartoonist, B. H. Moon; Photographer, W. C. Abbott.

We wish to express our thanks to the "Agricultures" for handling the Orange and Blue for us last time. They put out their issue in a style characteristic of their class. When they take hold of a thing they make it go, whether it is an issue of the college paper, or a balky mule. In fact, they displayed such journalistic ability that they have been given a permanent job on next year's Orange and Blue.

The foundations have been laid for the new library. But how about that gymnasium?

The final examinations begin in about a week, so this is the last number of the 1908 Orange and Blue, and we take occasion to express to our subscribers and advertisers our appreciation of their help. We realize that the paper has not been as great a success as it might have been; and it has not been as good a

We realize that the paper has not been as great a success as it might have been; and it has not been as good a paper as we had planned and expected to make it; but we hope that our class has looked upon our shortcomings with leniency, and have been satisfied with our efforts. We appreciated the honor conferred, and have tried to live up to the class' expectations of us.

It may be of interest to the Juniors to know that while our treasury is empty, there are no debts.

Thanks to the advertisers and 25 per cent. of the students who subscribed, there were funds enough even to pay back the editors' "contingent fees" deposited at the first of the year.

Hoping that all of the Seniors will graduate, that all of the cadets will spend a pleasant vacation, and wishing the next Orange and Blue board unlimited success, we are,
